THROUGH THE FOREST.

The Old and Young Danced All Night—Our Hardy Ancestors.

Old men live in the past.
Perhaps it would be better for the young men of the present, if they lived a little bit more in the past, and drew less on the future.

The log cabins of primitive times would seem very cheerless habitations to the people who live in the finely constructed, furance heated mansions of to-day. But our grandparents took a great deal of comfort in these rude homes.

They were rugged and healthy.
The men had stalwart and hardy frames, and the women were free from the modern ailments that make the sex of to-day piteous. Helpless slaves to hired foreign help.

White-haired grand-sires frequently took their life partners and on hoback rode a score of miles through the forests to enjoy the lively pleasures of a frontier ball, danced till daylight, rode home again in the early morning, then put in a good day's work.

Middle-aged folks of to-day couldn't stand that sort of a racket.
These mud-chinked log cabins doctors' visits were a rarity. The inhabitants lived to a rugged and green old age.

Sometimes these log cabin old-timers were taken ill. They were not proof against all the exposures to which they were subjected. They found the effective remedies for these common ailments in the roots and herbs which grew in the neighboring forests and fields. They had learned that nature has a cure for every ill.
These potent remedies assisted their sturdy frames to quickly throw off disease and left no poison in the system.

The unpleasant feature of modern practice with mineral medicines is the injurious after effect on the system. May not modern physical degeneracy be due to this feature?

A drug-saturated system is not in a natural, consequently not in a healthy, state. If any of the main organs are clogged with traces of the mineral poisons used to drive out a particular disease, the whole machinery of life is deranged and early decay of natural powers is the inevitable result.

There can be no question that remedies from the laboratory of nature are the best. If they are as efficacious, they have the advantage of leaving no after effect.

Their efficacy, if properly compounded, and the proper remedy applied to the proper disease, will not be doubted. The experience of ages proves it.

Their disease has come about principally through the rapid congregation of people in cities and villages, rendering these natural remedies difficult to obtain. Progressive business enterprise has lately led to putting these old time remedies within reach of all classes.

The proprietors of Warner's safe remedies, in the faith that the people of to-day would be benefited by using the simple remedies of log cabin days, have caused investigations to be made and secured the formulas of a number of those which long and successful use had proved to be most valuable.

They will, we learn, be known under the general title of "Warner's Log Cabin Remedies." Among these medicines will be a "Sarsaparilla" for the blood and liver, "Log Cabin Hops and Buchu Remedy" for the stomach, etc., "Log Cabin Cough and Consumption Remedy," a remedy called "Scalpine," for the hair, "Log Cabin Extract" for internal and external use, and an old valuable discovery for catarrh called "Log Cabin Rose Cream." Among the list is also a "Log Cabin Plaster" and a "Log Cabin Liver Pill." marriage and half shut afterwards.

terest in my welfare," remarked an unsuccessful lover. "No, indeed," only in your farewell."
"Well, old fellow, it's all settled. I am to be married in two months. You will be one of the witnesses, I hope."
"Count upon me. I never desert a friend in misfortune."

"Maria, I wish you were a native of France," said Smythe, as he rolled over in bed at 1 a.m. "I'd like to know why?" "Because I don't know a word of French."—Washington Critic.

"Did you know a mule was a mighty intelligent animal?" said Smythe to Brown. "No." "Well, he is." "How do you make that out?" "Look at the amount of brayan' work he does."—

WOMEN WITH SMALL FEET.

Experience of a Dealer in Coverings For the Pedals.

If you were to ask almost any shoe dealer whom he considered the most troublesome customers, the answer would be: "Women with small feet." There are various forms of vanity, but it is doubtful if any can equal the vanity of the owner of a small foot. It might be supposed that a person with a small foot would be satisfied to wear comfortable fitting shoes, but the facts are that the smaller the foot the smaller the shoe that is wanted in proportion. No matter how small, the desire is to make the feet appear smaller still. Persons with generous feet, on the contrary, usually make up their minds to accept the inevitable and make the best of it. They know only too well that the big feet will exhibit themselves in all their bigness, and so there is no use in forcing them to look small in the vain attempt to make them look small the man with big feet almost invariably wears a size or two larger than is necessary, because he feels that inasmuch as his feet can never win admiration they can at least be comfortable, and will be sure to command respect when it comes to a question of standing in close quarters.

The lady with small feet is a terror to shoe dealers, unless they have learned just how to humor her little vanity.
The successful dealer proceeds something like this: The lady comes in, and asks to see a French kid button, size 2.
The dealer looks at her with a surprised air as if he did not understand and asks, "What size did you say, please?"

She repeats rather shyly, "Number two."

The dealer apparently understands and says: Oh, "you want something for your little sister, I suppose?"

No, she does not. She wants something for herself, and as this the dealer looks incredulous and he may even venture to ask, "Why, can you wear a number two?"

She will answer: "Of course I wear number two, and they are dreadful big, but I don't believe in pinching my feet."

The dealer will then say: "I am not sure whether I have a number two in that line or not. You see we so seldom have calls for those very small sizes that we do not keep them. Most of our sales in ladies' shoes are numbers four and five, and up to a number seven."

Yes, here is a pair of number two, would you like to try them on?"

Of course, she wants to try them on, for she noticed the dealer's hesitation and his doubtful manner, and she is determined to convince him and make him acknowledge the victory of small feet. The dealer will tug away until the foot is squeezed in, and then he will stand back and exclaim: "Well, I never would have believed it. I have been in the shoe business forty years, and I never saw such a small foot for a lady of your size. We have one customer who wears number three-and-a-half, but they pinch her feet and she is so vain that she will never admit it. But these shoes are actually loose on your feet. I really believe you could wear a half size smaller if you wanted to."

That will settle it, particularly if there are others within hearing who will strain to catch a glimpse of the wonderful feat. Then she will commence to tell about how much trouble she has in getting shoes, and how she never can find anything to fit. How an impudent clerk in Blank & Co.'s positively in-sulted her by saying he was sure she could not wear two, and that he could fit her with a pair of fives. The idea of such impudence! She will take the shoes and not question the price, and every one of her acquaintances will hear of the very first opportunity about how the dealer didn't believe she could wear two, but he had been forty years in the business and never saw such feet before, and what a nice man that dealer was, etc., etc.

If, on the contrary, the dealer simply hands out a pair of number twos when first called for and fits them on without a word of comment, or, as a matter of course, he may depend upon it that there will be something wrong with the shoes. The "no" will not be right or the price too high, and her acquaintances will be informed that the dealer is a perfect ignoramus, that his shoes are horrid and the prices outrageous.
It is these little features of diplomacy or tact in understanding what is expected that make the successful shoe dealer as well as the successful politician or ambassador. As long as people have their little foibles and weaknesses, it is no harm to humor them and so increase the sum of human happiness, and it is much better than to needlessly offend and make bitter enemies.

Eastern Girl—"How enthusiastic you are about that western town." "Western Youth—"Town? Not town, city." E. G.—"Oh, I didn't understand. I had an idea from your conversation that it was rather a new place. I should love to visit and see your art galleries and theatres, and institutions of learning, and—"W. Y.—"Well, we haven't got them yet, but if you'd come to our city we'd show you things that would make your mouth water." E. G.—"Indeed." W. Y.—"You bet! We need show you some of the finest $10,000 vacant lots you ever set eyes on."
—Tid-bits.

Boston Man—"I think people must be becoming honest. I have carried a valuable silk umbrella for five years, and no one has ever touched it yet." Omaha Man—"Got a lock on it?" "No, it is just like any other handsome umbrella. I bought it from John L.
Sullivan. His name is on the handle."
—Omaha World.

A true sarcasm is like a sword stick—it appears at first sight to be much more innocent than it really is, till all of a sudden there leaps something out of it—sharp and deadly and incisive—which makes you tremble and recoil.
—Sydney Smith.

As the tree is fertilized by its own broken branches and fallen leaves, and grows out of its own decay, so men and nations are bettered and improved by trial, and refined out of broken hopes and blighted expectations.—F. W. Robertson.

Brown—"Do you know how long Robinson has been keeping house?" Smith—"No; but it must be a good many years. I took dinner with him the other day, and he carried a duck without spilling it on the floor."
—Harper's Bazar.

ships average three tons of coal each.
